Deutsche Bank announces obligor exchange offer for eight senior debt instruments

Deutsche Bank (XETRA: DBKGn.DE/NYSE: DB) announces its intention to exchange eight senior debt securities with a total principal value of $9.7 billion originally issued out of the Frankfurt and London branches into substantially equivalent notes issued by its New York branch.

The Exchange Notes will have the same interest rate, interest payment dates and maturity date as those of the Original Notes, although certain other specific terms within the exchange notes may differ.

Deutsche Bank has in recent years been focusing its U.S. dollar bond issuances into its New York branch in an effort to align its U.S. dollar funding with the entities that are the primary consumers of U.S. dollar funding. In addition, changing the direct issuing entity to the New York branch may have benefits for the Deutsche Bank group under the recently enacted U.S. tax reform.

The exchange offer encompasses the following eight securities:

ISIN

US25152R2V48

US25152R2U64

US25152R2X04

US25152R5F60

US251541AN81

US251541AQ13

US25152RXA66

US25152R2Y86

The offer is expected to expire at 11:59 p.m., New York City time, on 30 May 2018, unless extended by Deutsche Bank. Investors who participate in the exchange prior to 5:00 p.m., New York City time, on 15 May, 2018 will receive a $1 per $1,000 (0.10% of principal) early participation cash incentive payment.
